IONED THE BARBER'S FACE.

An Angry Chinaman Mutilates an Ugly Customer.

A Weapon Was Hot and Shambro Is Disfigured for Life.

Ang See, a laundryman, of No. 129 Second avenue, was held in the Court Street Court, Williamsburg, today, on a charge of assault. His victim, Henry Shambro, is in St. Catherine's Hospital, and the doctors say he will be disfigured for life. Justice Watson said the case was the most peculiar he had ever heard.

Shambro is a barber, at No. 129 Greenpoint avenue. Last night he was very much under the influence of liquor. He entered Ang See's laundry shortly before 7 o'clock and demanded some articles he said he had left to be laundered. As he could produce no check for the things, the laundryman calmly returned to his work of ironing.

Shambro was enraged. He swore violently at Ang See, but without producing any effect. Then Shambro picked up a bundle of clothes and threw them at Ang See, who was sitting at his work.

It was now Ang See's time to wake up, and he was not slow to do so. He made so much noise that several hundred people collected outside. Shambro tried to walk out with the bundle, and as he reached the door he was attacked by Ang See, who struck him on the head with a hot iron. Ang See then ran over the man's face until the skin came off in strips.

The barber screamed for help, but before any arrived his hands and head had also been gone over and he would probably have been killed had not several men from the crowd dragged the infuriated Chinaman away.

Ang See fought like a maniac, but he was overpowered after receiving pretty rough treatment.

There was loud talk about lynching, but two policemen subdued the disorder and locked Ang See up.

DOUBLE FREEZE-OUT FOR HER

Mrs. Williams's Suit for $5,000 Damages Thrown Out of Court.

She Said an "L" Road Porter Made Her Stay Out in the Cold.

Sarah D. Williams brought suit for $5,000 damages in the City Court, Brooklyn, against the Kings County Elevated Railroad Company for alleged outrageous treatment by one of the Company's employees.

She charges that on the night of Jan. 10, 1893, when the temperature was one degree below zero, she was compelled to stand on the platform at the Sunnyside station for over half an hour, although a bright fire was burning in the waiting room, and the was warm and comfortable. As a result of this exposure to the freezing atmosphere, she says she contracted a cold which developed into the grip. She has not yet recovered.

On the witness-stand to-day she testified that she reached the station at 1:30 A. M. On the platform at the Sunnyside station she saw a colored porter sitting in a woman's place.

Mrs. Williams demanded to be admitted to the room, but no attention was paid to her request.

After she had told her story, Lawyer Hirsch, who represents the Company, moved that the complaint be dismissed. He said there was no proof that the plaintiff had not been in the room before she arrived at the railroad station.

Judge Clement took the same view of the case, and granted the application.

BOTH HELD IN $8,000 BAIL.

Madden and Folmer to Be Tried for Long Island Burglaries.

Police Have Strong Evidence from the Women Who "Squealed."

LONG ISLAND CITY, L. I., June 6.—Christopher Madden and George Folmer, who have been accused by Mrs. Kinsella, wife of one of their former "pals," with having been connected with robberies in Long Island, Connecticut and Massachusetts, were held in $8,000 bail each for trial a week from to-day by Police Justice Duffy this morning.

Madden, the big, brawny fighter, who escaped punishment before because of a lack of evidence, was started by the amount of bail required, but the Justice would not relax. Folmer, a brawny, law-law of the woman who accuses him, made no protest. With his eyes to the floor he reached out his hands for the handcuffs as he was led away.

The Long Island police believe that now, because of a family quarrel, they will break up a gang of robbers that had challenged the skill of the police of New York, Connecticut and Massachusetts. Not only has Mrs. Kinsella turned State evidence against them, but Folmer, the wife of the man arraigned to-day, and Maggie O'Neil, who, it is believed, was the diamond stolen from the Cord Meyer house, will, the police think, testify against them.

It is not enough to make certain the conviction of Madden and Folmer.

Mrs. Kinsella is the wife of Thomas Kinsella, who is serving a term of fifteen years in the Wethersfield, Conn., prison for a robbery committed in Bridgeport, Conn. He was captured with one of his pals, named William Mahoney, who is also serving fifteen years in the same institution.

In the same raid a third member of the gang, ex-City Constable Edward Fitzgerald of Long Island City, was shot by Policeman Larking while trying to escape from the building and died in the hospital several days later.

Since her husband was sent to prison, Mrs. Kinsella, it is said, has been driven by poverty, and a belief that she has not been treated fairly, to give the names of the robbers. Madden had already been suspected, and even arrested about two months ago, but the police did not have enough evidence against him. Folmer had been known to the police.

It is said that Mrs. Kinsella's sister and his quarrel with his wife, led to the present developments.

It is said that Mrs. Kinsella's sister and his quarrel with his wife, led to the present developments.

Among the robberies planned in her house was that on Patrick Laehn, who lived in Riverhead, and who was the wife of the couple had saved $500, and one night during the absence of Laehn, the couple planned to rob him.

At the point of a pistol made the old woman give up the money. They then went to a Dr. Dreier's house in Vernon avenue and secured about $400 in money and jewelry.

They returned to Mrs. Kinsella's house and told the story of the latter robbery with great gusto. Mrs. Kinsella listened to it with evident enjoyment, and has since related the circumstances to the police so definitely that the formal charges are based on the Dr. Dreier robbery.

Who probably the most important robbery of which Mrs. Kinsella has told was that of the Christopher Meyer mansion, where she says she saw the diamonds belonging to the sisters of Christopher and Cord Meyer, were seen by her.

It is believed, figures in this case, but the police are not willing to talk about them. Mrs. Kinsella's story, the officials think there will be no trouble in substantiating it.

The story is told that the women determined to inform the police after a robbery was made at the latter's rooms one night recently. As he came in, it is said, Folmer told his wife that he had come to the latter's rooms and a plunger downstairs and escaped, but Mrs. Kinsella says Folmer then struck her on the head and just then Madden entered the room.

The men left, she alleges, before she had recovered to attend to her own help. She thinks they were drunk. Afterward she told her story to Police-Sergeant Rouletta, and the men were arrested last night. Folmer in New York.

Mrs. Kinsella says she heard the gang talk of robbing a Lenox and Stockton bridge last Summer, but they never told her the details. One of the gang was Michael Shurlock, who was arrested and charged with the robbery of the Lenox and Stockton bridge. He is now waiting trial in Massachusetts. He is a particular favorite of the police.

It is a tough-looking man, and has been made to look repulsive through the loss of a part of his under lip, which was bitten off by a man he killed here six years ago.

FLED WITH THE OVERCOAT.

Mr. Stockwood Ran, Too, and the Thief Was Jailed.

Daniel Maloney, alias Mahoney, twenty-three years old, of 175 Hickock street, Brooklyn, was a prisoner this morning charged with trying to walk off with a fine Spring overcoat belonging to George P. Stockwood, of 37 Remsen street.

Mr. Stockwood stepped into the hall yesterday and saw Maloney putting on his garment. Money Red, Stockwood's brother, called the police, and several others joined in the chase, and Maloney was caught in front of the Hamilton Club.

Thieves entered Mrs. E. Goodman's millinery store, 1361 Fulton street, last night and stole ribbon worth $500. Hatfield, 62 Sunnyside avenue, early this morning and secured $45.

Accuses His Collector.

Joseph P. Walters, a salesman, of 312 Lafayette avenue, Brooklyn, was arrested last night on complaint of Jordan A. Johnston, of 100 Stuyvesant avenue, who alleged that the prisoner, while in his employ, collected $100 and failed to account for it. Walters denies the accusation.

TO INSPECT THE WATERSHED.

Brooklyn City Officials Off on a Junketing Trip.

Water Frequently Found Contaminated by Sewage.

The Brooklyn Board of Aldermen, City Clerk Benjamin and their friends started on a junketing expedition this morning through the Brooklyn watershed.

At Hempstead the Aldermen had arranged to meet Mayor Schieren. City Works Commissioner White and other officials, when the whole party would begin the inspection of the proposed extension to Massapequa.

Commissioner White said this morning that the Aldermen would pay particular attention to the work which has been going on in cleaning the ponds and streams ever since "The Evening World" called the attention of the Department to the polluted condition of Brooklyn's water supply.

For several weeks Commissioner Emory, of the Health Department, has had regular analyses made of the water supplied to the residents of the city. He has made a report upon the matter to Commissioner White, which contains a list of the discoveries of contamination that the Commissioner refuses to make the report public.

He stated, however, that in samples taken from a number of city houses the analysis showed that the water contained sewage in alarming quantities. These samples, however, showed that the water was pure.

"The report of Commissioner Emory," said Commissioner White, to an "Evening World" reporter this morning, "is not made public, because coming from an official source, it is an affront to the city. It might cause unwarranted alarm among some residents."

The Department is taking every precaution now to remedy the evil, and soon we shall have the ponds and streams of the watershed so thoroughly cleaned that I hope the next analysis will show no traces of contamination."

They Wanted a Contract at $449 Which Was Let for $825.

Blame Put on Supervisor Fitchie's Clerk, McGinness.

Superior-at-Law Thomas Fitchie, of Kings County, this morning began an inquiry into the granting of a contract by the Board of Supervisors to Thomas Neary for repairs in the Sheriff's office, when the bid of Taylor & Sons was the lowest.

Mr. Fitchie found that Neary bid $25 and Taylor & Sons bid $449 for the same work. He said that his clerk, Martin Taylor, a member of the firm, had bid $25 and that his clerk, John J. McGinness, was responsible for the awarding of the contract, as he is said to have made certain misrepresentations to the Committee on Contracts.

A Democratic member of the Board called on Mr. Fitchie this morning, and said that the latter had granted Neary the contract. The Democratic member stated, was influencing committees in the House to grant the contract.

TAKEN ILL IN COURT.

Lawyer Hess Breaks Down During the John Mathews Trial.

After seven days of hard fighting, the prosecution rested, last evening, in the trial of John Mathews, in the United States Circuit Court.

Mathews, who was formerly a partner in the firm of Pitt & Scott, is charged with conspiracy to defraud the Government out of Customs duties.

Ex-Senator Charles P. McClelland, of Dobbs Ferry, opened for the defense this morning. His plea for Mathews's acquittal, was based on the theory that Mathews was the victim of two wicked partners, Thomas E. Jones and William Todd, who succeeded in escaping when Mathews was arrested.

The trial has been unusually long and complicated. Ex-Senator McClelland believes the strain has been too much for Mr. Hess, who is of a highly nervous temperament.
